About Seminar

The theme of the seminar "IPR in the Digital Age: Navigating the Challenges of Online Content Creation and Distribution" focuses on exploring the various challenges and complexities associated with IPR in the digital age. The seminar seeks to bring together legal experts, industry professionals, policymakers, and academics to discuss the current state of IPR and to identify best practices for navigating the ever-evolving landscape of digital content creation and distribution.

One of the primary challenges of IPR in the digital age is the issue of copyright infringement. With the ease of online content creation and distribution, it has become easier than ever for individuals to copy and distribute copyrighted material without proper authorization. This has led to a rise in piracy, and creators are finding it increasingly difficult to protect their work from unauthorized use.

Another challenge is the question of ownership of digital content. In the traditional publishing world, it was clear who owned the rights to a piece of content. However, in the digital age, content is often created collaboratively, and ownership can be difficult to determine. The seminar will explore the legal frameworks that govern ownership and collaboration in the digital space.

The seminar will also address issues related to fair use and creative commons licensing, which have become increasingly important in the digital age. Fair use allows for the use of copyrighted material for certain purposes, such as criticism, commentary, or educational purposes, without obtaining permission from the copyright holder. Creative Commons licensing provides a framework for creators to share their work under specific conditions, such as requiring attribution or prohibiting commercial use.

Overall, the seminar will provide a platform for participants to share their knowledge, experiences, and insights on IPR in the digital age. The discussions will help to identify best practices and strategies for navigating the challenges associated with online content creation and distribution. The outcome of the seminar will be of immense value to creators, policymakers, industry professionals, and anyone else involved in the creation, distribution, and consumption of digital content.
